

United States to Undertake Colossal Campaign to Break Up German Submarine War

Unable to Send An Army Into the Field at the Present Time, President Wilson Decides to Concentrate All Efforts on Keeping Allies Supplied With Food and Munitions.

TO BUILD THREE SHIPS EVERY DAY

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 12.—A campaign of colossal proportions to break down the German submarine blockade and keep the Entente plentifully supplied with food, clothing and munitions has been determined upon by President Wilson and his advisers as America's first physical stroke against her enemies. Unable to send an army into the trenches the President believes the United States can do an even greater service in the common cause against Germany by provoking a great armada of merchantmen to invalidate the undersea campaign, about which have been raised the falling hopes of Prussian conquest. Quickly-built, light, wooden ships of 2,000 tons and upwards are to make up the fleet of merchantmen and to insure maximum construction the shipping board has enlisted the country's entire shipbuilding facilities, now the greatest in the world. Upward of 100 private plants on all the coast will help, giving the board's orders precedence over every other class of work except the most urgent naval construction. For the first year production is expected to reach an average of three ships a day.

TO CALL FOR 500,000 VOLUNTEERS.
WASHINGTON, April 12.—The War Department today prepared to issue instructions to recruiting officers which will be in effect a call for 500,000 volunteers. All recruits enlisted will be notified that they will be discharged at the close of the war, putting them in the status of war-time volunteers.

FRENCH AND BRITISH BOTH SUCCESSFUL ON THE WESTERN FRONT

By Associated Press.

PARIS, April 12.—In an attack last night on the new front below St. Quentin, between Concy and Quincy-Basse, the French drove back the Germans to the southwestern edge of the upper Concy forest, capturing several important positions, the war office announced. In the Champagne the Germans were ejected from trenches east of Saignelieu.

LONDON, April 12.—The British

captured early this morning two important positions in the enemy line north of the Vimy ridge and are now astride of the river Souchez, according to an official statement issued by the war office.

A number of prisoners were taken. The statement says the weather conditions continue wet and stormy.

Two German counter attacks on Vimy ridge were broken up last night with heavy losses to the attackers.

BRITISH DELIVER TELLING

STROKES NEAR ST. QUENTIN

Despite the most unfavorable weather conditions prevailing, the British continue the delivery of telling strokes against the Germans along the line from Lens to St. Quentin.

Apparently devoting the greater part of their attention to the important sector of the line near Vimy ridge, the British today drove against two important positions north of the ridge and captured them. This blow was driven home southwest of Lens and enabled the British to advance their lines on both sides of the Souchez river.

All German attempts to regain on the ridge itself have been foiled. They tried last night to drive General Haig's troops from the position they had established on the northern end of the ridge but the machine guns broke up the assault with heavy German losses. Further progress for the British below the river Scarpe where Monchy to Preux was captured yesterday, is reported.

Much importance is attached to the resumption by the French of the general attack. Apparently they are giving the Germans in the region southwest of Laon all they can attend to, preventing any reinforcements from this sector of the line menaced by the British offensive.

dispatch to the State Department from Ambassador Sharp at Paris forwarded the information from the American consul at Tunis.

STILLWAGON WRITES FROM

"SOMEWHERE ON SEAS"

A letter from his son, John Emmet Stillwagon, dated "somewhere on the seas," has been received by John Stillwagon. The letter was written on board the battleship South Carolina, on which Stillwagon is a sailor. Mail from the United States navy is not dated nor is the location of the writer stated. It is brought to the Navy Department and then forwarded by postoffice officials. Stillwagon was located at Hampton Roads before the sailing of the fleet which is now on the seas.

Letters have been received here dated "Somewhere in France" or "England" but the one received from Mr. Stillwagon from his son, is the first with such an indefinite postmark as "somewhere on the seas." Some time ago Stillwagon paid a visit to his home here while on a furlough. If the United States navy takes an active part in the naval war he will likely see service.

MORE DETAILS OF EDDYSTONE PLOT

Acid Poured Into a Shell Thought to Have Blown Up Munitions Plant.

By Associated Press.
CHESTER, Pa., April 12.—After extended investigation, company officials today reaffirmed their belief that an ingenious plan conceived in the brains of enemy plotters was the cause of the disastrous explosion on Tuesday at the plant of the Eddystone Ammunition corporation near here. They asserted their conviction that the disaster was deliberately perpetrated as part of a campaign of terrorism.

It was said that a plotter with severe confederates could have caused the explosion by dropping capsules of acid into several of the three inch shells. The time it would take for the acid to eat its way through the gela line capsules, it was stated, would have given the plotters sufficient time to leave the plant.

Other points in support of the plot theory are the warnings that numerous munitions workers are said to have received bidding them to quit their occupation as the plant was to be blown up within a month after the United States declared a state of war against the Imperial German government.

Experts today are analyzing powder in the shrapnel shells at the ruins of the Eddystone Ammunition corporation with the hope of establishing beyond doubt the cause of the explosion on Tuesday.

The experts are from the Dupont Powder company. They worked all night and continued their investigation today assisted by the Eddystone authorities.

IN POWDER EXPLOSION

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—An accidental explosion of powder in the detonating department of the government arsenal at Frankford, a suburb, where ammunition is being made in great quantities, killed Philip McNally and fatally injured Joseph Miller. The two men were the only occupants of the small structure in which they were working. McNally was instantly killed. Miller was blown through a window and terribly injured. In buildings nearby, 1,500 women and girls were at work making ammunition and soldiers' clothing. They were in no danger.

FLOWERS FOR FULTON

Two Bouquets for Boy Soldier Who

Lost His Life Here.

The body of Stewart Fulton, the boy soldier who was killed on the railroad here while guarding the Baltimore & Ohio bridge at Soden, was shipped to Philadelphia on the 2:15 Pennsylvania train yesterday afternoon. About 15 of Fulton's comrades formed a guard of honor at the station and six of them acted as pallbearers.

Accompanying the remains were two floral tributes, one from Connellsville judge of Moore, and the other from patriotic townspeople who contributed to a fund raised by The Courier during the morning. The placing of flowers on the coffin of the soldier lad was the only thing Connellsville could do to honor his memory. A card accompanying them read:

"A tribute to the memory of a soldier boy from residents of Connellsville."

TO GIVE MOVIE FOR BOYS' CAMP

Religious Picture, "Mary Magdalene," to Be Shown at Orpheum Theatre on Sunday.

C. H. Yost and J. E. Hoffman, of Pittsburgh, are in the city in the interests of the Clairvaux Camp for Boys and have completed arrangements for the exhibition of the well known picture play, "Mary Magdalene," in the Orpheum theatre Sunday afternoon from 2 to 4 and from 6 to 11 o'clock.

The purpose of the present activity in behalf of this benevolent enterprise is to raise funds to liquidate a mortgage of $34,000 on the camp property, which is located on the Harmony car line 24 miles out of Pittsburgh, and to make it possible to keep the camp open the entire year instead of during the summer months only.

The camp is a non-sectarian institution for the purpose of giving a summer outing to the boys of the cities and towns of Western Pennsylvania who are unable, for lack of means, to indulge this form of recreation. Rev. Bernard G. McGuigan is superintendent of the camp and gives his entire time to the work of directing the physical and moral training of the boys and inculcating in them the principles of good citizenship. Parents who are able to pay can send their boys upon payment of a weekly charge of $3.

Rev. John T. Burns, pastor of the Immaculate Conception church, is arranging to send a company of 35 or 40 boys from this section to the camp when the coming season opens.

MINE CONFERENCE

Workmen Seek Wage Increase of 20 to 33 1-3 Per Cent.

NEW YORK, April 12.—A conference through which 225,000 miners in the bituminous regions in Illinois, Ohio Indiana and Western Pennsylvania seek wage increases ranging from 20 to 33 1-3 per cent was begun here today. Thirty-two operators entered into deliberation with 35 men representing the United Mine Workers of America.

The miners were headed by their president, John P. White. The conference passes plenary powers and any decision reached, it was stated, would be binding on both sides.

The problem of the wage increase is the only one under consideration, question of hours and working conditions not being discussed. The present wage agreement which went into effect in 1915 and expires next year gave the miners 5 to 14 per cent better wages. New increases are sought, according to the miners, which would be proportionate in part to the highest cost of living.

"The conference is really a measure of national defense," Mr. White said before the meeting began. "We wish to put our house in order so the nation can have no occasion to complain that its coal producers are not performing satisfactorily the tremendously important task assigned to them."

"The miners are anxious to do their bit. They will mine all the coal needed for our ships and factories and do it ungrudgingly. They will not take advantage of the nation's necessities but they want to do their bit on full stomachs."

FATAL ACCIDENTS IN FAYETTE SHOW INCREASE IN 1917

Four More Deaths For First Quarter Than in Similar Period in 1916.

INSPECTORS IN SESSION

James S. Darr of Connellsville, Leads Discussion On Co-operation With Other Authorities; Pledge of Support in the War Crisis is Made.

Fatal accidents in the 11 counties comprising the Western Pennsylvania district increased in the first three months of 1917 over the corresponding period of 1916, despite all precautionary steps of the factory inspectors, according to reports submitted at a conference of factory inspectors in Pittsburgh Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. In Fayette, according to Factory Inspector James S. Darr of Connellsville, the number jumped from 26 in 1916 to 30 in 1917, there being six industrial fatalities in 1916, 19 in the mines and one in public service plants, whereas in the first quarter of the present year there were five deaths in industrial plants, three in public service plants and 22 in the mines.

The total for the entire district was 93 industrial fatalities, 97 mining and 22 public service, compared with 85 industrial, 161 mining and 23 public service in 1916. Mining fatalities and those in public service operations both showed decreases.

In Westmoreland county there were three fatalities in industrial plants and 36 in the mines this year so far while for the first quarter of 1916 there were two in industrial plants, three in public service operations and 12 in the mines.

The conference included discussions by various inspectors of problems they go up against. Mr. Darr, who has shown best results in securing co-operation of other authorities in his work, lead the discussion of that subject.

The inspectors adopted the following resolution offering their support to the governor in his efforts to marshal the state's resources for the war: "Whereas, The United States and Congress has declared that a state of war exists with a foreign nation, and whereas, the governor of this state has pledged the support of all people and the resources of this commonwealth to the federal government, therefore,

"Be it resolved, that we, the inspectors force of the State Department of Labor & Industry of the Pittsburgh district, comprising 12 counties in Western Pennsylvania, in meeting assembled this date, commend the action of the governor and through the head of our department, Commissioner John Price Jackson, assure the state and federal authorities that we will each hold ourselves in readiness to do and perform any service to which we may be assigned, with an earnest hope that our country will emerge victoriously from this great conflict and the rights and liberties of the people of this nation be maintained and preserved."

ADA PLANT SOLD

Harry S. Scheibler, Greensburg, Makes Purchase; Consideration $45,000.

The plant of the Ada Coal & Coke company above Chest Haven was sold Tuesday by J. D. Springer, a Uniontown real estate agent, and Josiah M. Rhodes, of Springhill township, to Harry S. Scheibler of Greensburg, for $45,000. The plant consists of 40 ovens and a slope mine, together with 72.34 acres of coal in three tracts. In addition to paying $45,000 for the property Mr. Scheibler assumed a mortgage for $10,000 on the coal tracts.

The plant has been operated since January, 1916, by Messrs. Springer and Rhodes, under the name of the Ada Coal & Coke company. They leased the plant at that time and purchased it last August for $20,000. Mr. Rhodes has given his attention to the operation of the plant during the last 15 months and has made it one of the most profitable small operations in the region.

MEYERSDALE MAN ELECTROCUTED

Reuben Walker Is Believed to Have Come in Contact With Live Wire at Barlett.

Special to The Courier.

MEYERSDALE, April 12.—This community was shocked on Wednesday afternoon when the news was spread that Reuben Walker had been killed. The accident occurred at Garrett at about 2:30 o'clock. Mr. Walker was employed with the Economy Telephone company and was putting up wires and in some manner he slipped from the pole when he caught hold of a live light wire along the same line, and it is thought that he was killed instantly from the shock. ## A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—
—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women as well as men have found Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets a successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

U. S. WILL TRY TO BREAK UP GERMAN SUBMARINE WAR

An address was delivered by T. J. Brennan and "America" was sung by F. J. Murphy. The men gave a rousing cheer as the folds of the flag looked to the breeze in the last rays of the setting sun.

The railroad men wanted a flag to fly over their place of work and by subscriptions secured enough money to purchase the one raised yesterday. Patriotic enthusiasm runs high among the railroad men and flags are seen everywhere throughout the yards, some on engines and cabooses.

TIN PLATE MILL AT SCOTTSVILLE UNDER GUARD.

Since Tuesday the American Sheet & Tin Plate mill at Scottdale has been under close guard. Children who have been in the habit of carrying their fathers' dinners to the mill are not at the gate of the works and delivered them to the persons for whom they are intended.

Employees or other persons who are not familiar to the guards are stopped and questioned before they are admitted to the works. This is the first works in the vicinity of Scottdale or Mount Pleasant which has been guarded.

ALL NATIONALITIES AT FLAG RAISING.

On Wednesday evening, April 11, almost half the population of the village assembled in front of the Union Supply company's store at Monaca to see the flag raising.

Prof. B. J. Colbert, principal of the Monaca schools, and his corps of seven teachers and the pupils, numbering about 250, marched, as the local Hungarian band played, "The Star Spangled Banner." As they reached the flag pole they sang "America."

The flag, a fine silk one loaned for the occasion by the Licensing Elég Nagy, Jozsef 18th. Betegseggyűző Egylet Society, was unfurled by six girls of the following nationalities: German, Russian, Austrian, Hungarian, Polish and American.

The parents of these American born foreigners have all become naturalized Americans. Prof. Colbert gave a very appropriate address on "Patriotism," closing with Burke's "Ode to the American Flag."

Among the many visitors were Prof. William E. Tibbitt, principal of the Dunbar township high school, Roy Honnberger, Mrs. Kelly and Clarence Strawn.

The flag pole, 80 feet high, was furnished by Superintendent Rex of the H. C. Frick Coke company.

Names of men and women to mobilize and conserve Fayette county's resources during the war were recommended for membership in the county branch of the state committee, and will be forwarded immediately to Harrisburg for Governor Duff's approval. The Fayette county committee will consist of about 100 members with the members of the general committee from this county acting as an executive board.

SOLDIER HERE GETTING READY FOR WAR SERVICE.

Albert Nasar, a member of Company E, Tenth Regiment, of Mount Pleasant, feeling that the company might be called out at any time, thought he ought to have a box to take along so he decided to make one. A new hatbox he had purchased broke as he was splitting a piece of wood and cut the tendons of his thumb. An ugly wound resulted and he went to the Memorial hospital for treatment.

RUN ON POSTAL SAVINGS BANK STOPS.

Since the declaration of war there has been somewhat of a run on the postal savings department of the Mount Pleasant postoffice, by the town residents of Mount Pleasant and vicinity. This is thought to have been caused by the fact that soon after war broke out in the old country, postal savings accounts of the residents were used for war purposes. However, a number of persons called at the postoffice this morning and deposited their savings.

Clark Yothers, postmaster at Mount Pleasant, this morning received a communication from the Postoffice Department to the effect that in event of war under no circumstances would the postal savings accounts of the properties of aliens be disturbed.

Camel CIGARETTES

You compare Camels with any cigarette for purity, wholesomeness, quality, flavor, aroma; for satisfying "body"—for anything any cigarette ever did offer you! You'll prefer Camels to straight Turkish or straight Domestic, or any cigarette you ever smoked! And Camels will not tire your taste! Camels will delight your fancy in many ways. The blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos does away with any unpleasant cigarette after-taste or after-effect. Smokers quickly realize that the absence of coupons or premiums is due to the cost of the tobaccos.

NEW GAME CODE

Open Season for Birds From November 1 to December 15.

HARRISBURG, April 12.—The new game code, introduced by Representative Miles A. Millron, and known as House Bill 187, was reported to the House yesterday from the committee on game as amended. The changes in the measure are the result of a joint session of the House and Senate committees, and the bill in its present form is expected to pass without material change.

The southeastern section of the state won a decided victory in the matter of the game seasons, and as a result the code now provides an open season for all small game, excepting woodcock, opening November 1 and closing December 15. The organized sportsmen of the state had recommended and fought for a season opening October 15, but the farmers and rabbit hunters of the southern counties were strong enough in the committee to postpone the season two weeks.

The sportsmen of Northwestern Pennsylvania who put up a hard fight to retain their woodcock shooting, were successful in keeping the opening of the season for that game bird at October 15, but the squirrels, rabbits, quail and grouse will come into season on November 1 and go out together on December 15.

MERCHANTS' SAY

They Prefer to Be Paid By Check. Five hundred Pittsburg merchants, who were interviewed last week, say they would much rather have their regular customers settle their accounts with checks than with cash, because paying by check is much safer both for them and their patrons. There is always danger in having large amounts of currency on the person in a store or at home. Why take the risk when the old reliable First National invites you, checking accounts no matter how small?—Adv.

At the Theatres

SOISSON THEATRE.

"THE PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE"—A two reel drama featuring Kingsley Benedict will be shown. Also four other reels. "The Universal Screen Magazine" contains many interesting subjects for everyone. Tomorrow Charles Chaplin appears in the two reel comedy, "Charlie's Hard Luck." Saturday Gale Kane appears in the five reel World drama,
"The Red Woman." When the society girl thought that the man she had picked out for her husband had been disfigured in his father's will, she broke her engagement but when she found later that the young man had really come into his fortune, then, she tried to get him back. She even made a trip to New Mexico for that express purpose and there she found that the young man had fallen in love with a beautiful young Indian maiden. And when the Indian maiden was told by the society girl of her engagement, the Indian girl told the man to go back east. But the man finally returned and was happily married to the girl of his choice in old Mexico. This reveals a part of the story of "The Red Woman," the newest World picture Brady-Made which will be shown at the Soisson Theatre on Saturday with Miss Gall Kane in the stellar part, as-isted by a particularly able cast.

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"THE INNOCENCE OF LIZETTE."
The charming and dainty actress, Mary Miles Minter, is featured in the five reel Mutual drama, "The Innocence of Lizette." Mrs. Vernon Castle appears in the 11th episode of the thrilling and interesting serial,
"Lizette." Tomorrow and Saturday,
William Fox presents Theda Bara,
the incomparable, in "Her Greatest Love." In this drama founded on Ouida's novel, "Moths," Miss Theda Bara reaches the height of her career in her impersonation of a young, unsophisticated English country girl, later that of a woman whose very soul
has been torn by agonizing emotions.
Miss Bara shows a versatility that has seldom been equalled in photo-drama art. Her characterization of Vera Herbert is evidence that Miss Bara possesses a depth of feeling and emotion entirely foreign to one who has made vampire roles famous the world over. The story of "Her Greatest Love" is one of deep human appeal. It tells of the machinations and the subtle intrigues of a typical society "butterfly" anxious to make an advantageous marriage for her daughter. In doing so she eventually schemes away her child's happiness
by marrying her to a Russian prince.
"His Merry Mix-Up," a three reel
comedy, will also be shown.

New Coal Co., 12 Greensburg.
Application will be made by E. E.
Kunkle, H. D. Dettendorfer, and M.
H. Smith of Greensburg for a charter for the Export Gas & Coal company.

"WAR BRIDES" A GREAT PICTURE

Alla Nazimova Appears in a Truly Wonderful Photoplay
Drama.

Alla Nazimova in "War Brides," appeared in Connellsville for the first time yesterday at the Paramount theatre and the general verdict of the large audience who saw it was that it undoubtedly ranked with the best films ever seen here. Some unqualifiedly pronounced it the best they had ever seen.

Disregarding comparisons, it was a wonderful picture. To begin with, Marion Craig Wentworth's story, first produced as a vaudeville sketch by Nazimova, has great screen possibilities, and Herbert Brenon, the producer, overlooked none of them. Nazimova rose to great heights of emotional acting as the bride who leads the women of her land to revolt against bringing babies into the world to be slaughtered in a useless and barbarous war of aggression. The supporting cast was excellent, especially the woman who played the mother whose sons all gave up their lives in the war. No more touching scenes were ever screened that that where the mother, her daughter and Nazimova, the daughter-in-law, receive word that all of the boys have been killed, and that where the mother bids farewell to her youngest son, the last of the family to be called.

There were women in the audience who wept and did not seem ashamed of their tears. "War Brides" is in some respects a woman's picture, but no man should miss seeing it on that account.

The picture will be shown again today, with shows at 1:30; 4; 6:30, and 9 o'clock P. M.

Battle For Batting Honors Keen Between Speaker, Cobb and Jackson

Photos by American Press Association.

Who will lead the American league in batting this year is exciting the greatest interest. Tris Speaker matched the honors away from Ty Cobb last year. Cobb freely states that he will get them back this year. Meanwhile there is Joe Jackson of the White Sox, who was the leading three bag avenger last year. In illustration Cobb is shown at top, Speaker center, Jackson lower.

COVELESKIE IN FORM.

Young Right Hander Will Not Be Worked Too Hard by Manager Fahl. Big things are expected of Stanley Coveleskie this year. Manager Fahl of the Cleveland team thinks that the young right hander will win many a game. Last season Coveleskie was worked hard, and the strain proved too great.

He was out of the game for half the season. The Cleveland pitching staff, in addition to "Mortie," Wood and Coveleskie, will include Lambeth, Gould, Klopfer, Combe, Boehling, Landerhik, Bagby, Dickerson and Petty.

Loose an Athlete to Army. The Wisconsin State university track team will lose a star pole vaulter because of his call to the colors. Otto Endres, who has been winning points and sailing over the bar at twelve feet, is a sergeant in Company B at La Crosse.

MASSAGING RUIN OF BIG ED WALSH

Excessive Treatment Deadened Wing of Famous Pitcher.

WAS A REGULAR IRON MAN

Despite Remonstrances He Was Rubbed Before the Game and After the Game and Sometimes in Between. Called Upon to Work in Box Often, He Never Shirked.

"I see where Ed Walsh is not on the White Sox team any more. Excessive massage put him out of baseball two years ahead of the time he should have been through."

Thus spoke a well-informed man who has followed the destinies of the Chicago ball club for many years. Walsh was a peculiar buster. He was called upon to work often. He never shirked, but he did insist on having his arm rubbed. Every day the trainer had to apply the soothing lotion and the muscle kneading. Walsh insisted on it. He was rubbed before the game and after the game and sometimes in between. Massage was his hobby, and he took it in the liberal portions that a man generally demands when the thing he wants costs nothing.

Fellow players remonstrated, but he knew. Wasn't he the greatest pitcher of his time? He was. Didn't he dust the hostilities of the plate with great regularity and more effect than the others? He did.

So he had his arm rubbed, morning, noon and night, so to speak.

"Rubbing," says King Brady of the Cubs, "is only artificial exercise. A muscle becomes sore from overwork or from a sprain. The trainer rubs the sore spot to stimulate the circulation of blood, which, of course, removes the soreness. The same effect could be obtained by proper exercise, but one resorts to massage to correct the one local fault. Exercise would put a strain on other muscles which already are in shape."

"If a player, such as a pitcher, has had his arm treated to excess he has submitted to just that much more artificial exercise, which in the long run saps his strength."

In handling sprinters and bull players I have come to the conclusion that there is in each man just so much energy to be expended. When that energy is expended you are done. The spirit may be willing, and the member may feel all right, but the zip is gone. Long rest in some cases may restore the expended vitality, but such cases are rare.

Artie Hoffman was a fine example. He tried a "comeback" with the Cubs last summer, but looked bad. Yet he was in prime physical condition.

DOUBLE HEADER RECORDS.

Two Victories or Two Defeats Result Offense Than Even Splits.

There can be only one of two opinions on the results of double headers in baseball—either they result in even breaks or they don't. Inquiry among the fans disclosed that the prevalent opinion is that when two games are played in one afternoon the result is usually a victory for each team. Research proves it wrong, however. The records of a period of years show that two victories or two defeats result oftener than even splits.

Just where the erroneous impression originated or what it thrived on is uncertain, but probably it is due to the fact that an even break usually results when a double header is played between pennant contending teams, which performance are fairly evenly matched. These important battles leave a more lasting impression on the memory.

The sum total of double headers in a season between the first division teams naturally will not be as great as the aggregate of double headers played between first division and second division teams plus those between two outcasts of the second division. In these less important contests the results, being of less consequence in the pennant race, do not make an indelible impression on the fan's brain.

WHY HE KEPT WAMBY.

His Play on Hard Hit Over Second Won Him Place on Team.

"Want to know why I kept Bill Wambeganna when fans and baseball writers were rapping him and saying he would not do?" asked Lee Fohl. "It was this: I'll grant you Bill was erratic in his first efforts as a second baseman. He used to mess up a lot of plays, but a couple of years ago Fohl, a young third sacker Connie Mack tried out, hit one over second base. It looked like a sure hit, but Wambie got it and got his man at first."

"I said then Wambie would make a good man at second, for a player who could pull such stunts could be drilled to get the easy ones."

"BLUE EYE" HASN'T ANY TERROR FOR SPEAKER.

TRIS SPEAKER cares for nothing when he steps to the plate. Even a "blue eye" doesn't discourage him. Cleveland's $80,000 center fielder, while pitching at New Orleans recently stopped a fierce liner with his left optic. A beautiful shiner resulted, and Tris sat on the bench until somebody handed him a plate of raw meat, which he clapped over his damaged lamp. Later in the day Speaker came to the bat with three men on bases and smashed the ball over the fence for a jog around the circuit. His wallop enabled the Clevelanders to crush the New Orleans team by a one sided score.

NEW STAR AT SHORTSTOP.

short for the National league champions in a manner that has gladdened the hearts of the Brooklyn fans.

Fabrique formerly was with the Providence team of the International league. He not only is a great infielder, but is handy with the bat.

SOUTHPAWS PLENTIFUL IN BOTH BIG LEAGUES

Every Team Has at Least One Good Post-Side Hurler.

Two or three years ago, during the existence of the Federal league, there was a scarcity of good southpaws in the National and American leagues and consequently many left handed batters had the distinction of hitting over the 300 mark.

Nearly every one of the sixteen clubs in the two big organizations has at least one really good southpaw. Some managers boast of two and others three. The three clubs best supplied are the Giants, the St. Louis Browns and last, but not least, the world's champion Red Sox.

In Babe Ruth and Dutch Leonard the Red Sox had two of the greatest southpaws that ever put foot on a pitching mound.

Leonard led the American league in pitching in 1915, and the powerful Ruth topped his rivals during the past season in efficiency. Besides the above two, Garvin had the veteran Vein Grege and Herb Pennock, who should get into the front rank this year.

McGraw will begin his 1917 fight for the National league flag and the right to participate in the world's series with three first class left handers who are well known and well liked by the fans. Feltie Schupp is the foremost.

At present there are fifteen left handers of the first magnitude in the American league and fourteen in the National league. The newcomers in the American league since 1914 are Mike Culp and George Mogridge of the Yankees, Babe Ruth of the Red Sox, Ernest Koob of the St. Louis Browns, Harry Harper of Washington and Fritz Combe of Cleveland. In the National league Sherrod Smith of Brooklyn, Eddie Seipp of New York, Arthur Nehf of Boston and Clarence Mitchell of Cincinnati.

SHEEP'S CLOTHING

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

AUTHOR OF "THE LONE WOLF," "THE BRASS BOWL," ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

"I've much to tell you, Betty," Craven answered with grave simplicity; then, turning to his daughter, "Lydia, Mrs. Merriell has just done me the honor to promise to become my wife, and the truth is—"

"To come out?" Mrs. Merriell supplied instinctively. "Exactly! I mean to say, it was all quite unpremeditated. It isn't fifteen minutes since we found we—ah—loved each other; since when I have been rather too preoccupied to advise Mrs. Merriell of all my affairs. In another hour, of course, she would have known. As it is, it is the fact of my prior marriage—"

"And?" Mrs. Merriell interjected with a spirit that commanded his deference. "We're father and son, aren't we? Don't overdo things. You're talking stupidly—quite unlike yourself. I don't care to hear more until you've found your bearings; and I want time to find mine, late the bargain. That's fair, isn't it?"

"Nothing more so," he affirmed cheerfully.

"Then I'll leave you to your—family reunion?"

Fugitively Craven's eyes conveyed what was at once a demand and an appeal. But before Lydia could respond Mrs. Merriell anticipated, with a quick movement crossing to draw her hands lightly upon the girl's shoulders.

"My dear Miss Craven," she said with an odd little catch in her voice. "I'm not sure yet I ought to call you Lydia; but I'm awfully fond of your father, and—ah—if I can get over what doesn't seem an unfair suspicion that he's kept me in the dark about you, I shall probably marry him."

"I can't wish him greater good fortune," said Lydia quietly. "You are a dear! And so beautiful!—I'm jealous. Do you think, Tad, it is wise to have two blondes in one family? Don't answer, please. It's a riddle I must solve to my own satisfaction before I listen to you again. But—I'm serious—think it over."

With a transient tightening of her grasp on Lydia's shoulders, a pressure that conveyed a hint of friendliness, the woman turned away.

"No," she insisted when Craven promptly ranged himself at her side. "Let me go for tonight, Tad. I'd prefer to be alone to think things out. Tomorrow, perhaps—"

Her smile flashed uncertainly toward Lydia as she disappeared round the shoulder of the deckhouse.

Craven delayed, however, barely long enough for a word. "Wait here—I shan't be long."

Lydia said nothing, but watched him go with eyes confused with pain, she who had found herself suddenly relegated from the status of a well-beloved child to that of a stumbling block in the path of her father's ambition, who could no longer doubt that he had planned to keep her existence secret until his marriage to Mrs. Merriell, of the fabulous fortune should be a consummated fact.

She stood desolate amid a debris of illusions, with had never known a mother, and now had lost a father. Her eyes filled. He hadn't even kissed her after five years' separation! Biting her lip, she turned at last toward the deckhouse, where she could no longer doubt that he had planned to keep her existence secret until his marriage to Mrs. Merriell, of the fabulous fortune should be a consummated fact.

A footfall sounded behind her, and she wheeled sharply about to find herself with her father. But it was Peter Tract, who, briskly rounding the deckhouse, pulled up short at sight of that tense young person, Lydia, with her shoulders back, her chin up, and defiance glimmering in her eyes.

"I beg your pardon—," he peered eagerly to make certain for the moon was just then thinly veiled in cloud. "It's Mrs. Tract, isn't it?"

"Yes, Mr. Tract," said the girl quietly, relaxing. "Good evening."

He seemed puzzled by her manner, started to say something, reconsidered sharply, then ventured with engaging deference. "It's good to see you up and about again."

"It feels pretty good, thank you," she said, with a smile that gave him courage.

"Hope I didn't startle you, galumphing into your solitude without warning. Fact is, I was looking for old Tad Craven. We're needing a fourth. I don't suppose you know Craven, though?"

"Oh, yes, I've known Mr. Craven a long time."

"Real?" He's a wonder, isn't he? Tract exclaimed with enthusiasm. "Everybody's friend—not an enemy in the world. I don't believe there's a better-liked man in New York—our New York, that is."

"Your New York? You see, I've always lived in England, and have lots to learn about—home."

"Sheer snobbery on my part," Peter admitted cheerfully. "I meant the very small part of New York, the one infest, whom my friend, Mr. Martin likes to call the 'idle rich.' If he only knew!"

"But are you?"

"I'm afraid I'm idle enough; but as for riches, I'm poverty's poor relation."

"But what do you do?"

"Oh, I play a good hand at bridge, a fair racket at tennis, and am always on hand to fill in when somebody doesn't show up for dinner. The least trace of bitterness toward this grotesque account of himself, and the conversation was accompanied by an uneasy laugh. "In short, I'm what your English friends call a western. But please don't think that I'm bidding for serious consideration."

"Understand," the girl said quietly. "I didn't mean to bore you, either."

"You didn't; but you made me think

She nodded, with her shadowy smile. A very grim, answered that. "You certainly take the curse off of it," Tract agreed. "Andor like yours is good for the system. The register of my self-esteem is now subnormal."

"Don't, please. Thus far you've done me good; but if you say more, betray the least real interest in me, I'll get chesty and need taking down again. And I'm forgetting Craven."

"He was here only a few minutes ago, and promised to come back before long."

"Then may I wait? You don't mind?"

"No," said the girl. "Indeed, I've something to tell you. You've praised him to my face, and that makes me want to tell you. I'm not Lucy Carter, really, Mr. Tract. My name is Lydia Craven. Thaddeus Craven is my father."

"Oh, I say!" Peter stared incredulously. "Not Tad Craven's daughter? You're serious?"

"Quite."

He nodded. "I see you are. But—well, you have surprised me. I don't suppose a soul who knows him would believe Tad Craven anything but a convinced bachelor."

So it was true—Craven had never mentioned his daughter to his friends! Staring seaward, Lydia worked her hands together gently; and, watching her closely, the man saw her face fugitively convulsed. And wisely he held silence.

"Mrs. Beggars' Knave," the girl said presently, "and Mrs. Merriell, and I dare say by tomorrow all his acquaintances on the ship will know. So, you see, I'm not violating his confidence. Only you spoke of him so warmly that you made me want you to understand."

A quiver touched her lips; but she persisted. "I'm afraid I've made a great mistake—embarrassed him horribly, turning up this way. But I didn't know he was a passenger. I supposed, of course, he was at home—in New York."

Much of Peter's charm lay in his instinctive recognition of those times when it is wisest to say nothing. Nobody could leave everything unsaid in a way more eloquent of sympathetic comprehension. So he stood very still, covertly watching her face and wondering.

"I couldn't help it—They forced me to it—the people I lived with in London. I knew it wasn't right, because I didn't love him. How can one marry a person one doesn't love? But when I wrote to daddy he wouldn't even answer, and I couldn't help it—I had to run away! And now, of course, he's furious with me—turning up here like this had done."

"Why should he resent that? I don't see why he couldn't have told us he had a daughter—especially one like you! It seems to me, the innocent bystander, that Tad hadn't any right to pose—"

"Don't! We mustn't misjudge him. You're his friend; surely you ought to make allowances for him. If I can, I'm sure he must have had his reasons—good enough reasons. If we only knew. Why must he take the world into his confidence?"

Daunted, Peter stared; then remembered himself that woman nature was a singular thing, its mental processes defying masculine analysis. "You're right," he asserted meekly, after a pause. "Of course you're right! I've known Tad Craven a long time and pretty well, if he is a bit older, and I know he wouldn't do anything dishonorable to or about me to hurt anybody. He's not that kind."

Impulsively Lydia's hand went out to Peter's; but in the long instant that they sat hand in hand and eye to eye, each smiling a trace consciously, signals of distress showed in her waver.

"I beg your pardon—," he peered eagerly to make certain for the moon was just then thinly veiled in cloud. "It's Mrs. Tract, isn't it?"

"Yes, Mr. Tract," said the girl quietly, relaxing. "Good evening."

He seemed puzzled by her manner, started to say something, reconsidered sharply, then ventured with engaging deference. "It's good to see you up and about again."

place, you've always believed yourself the child of American parents."

"But surely—" the girl expostulated. "Mrs. Grummie told me—"

"What she believed, too, no doubt. The truth is, your mother was an American; but I'm British to the marrow of me. Craven's a good English name, you know; but that it matters. I cut away from my people forever when they tried to prevent my marrying the woman I loved, an American girl who'd taken to the stage and somehow drifted to London. Well, we defied the family, and it disowned me, and I went on the stage with my wife. When you were born—yes, in Mrs. Grummie's, Bloomsbury—our combined pay didn't run to anything much. Most of the time one of us was out of a job. Still, we were happy enough till we went to America."

He was silent for several minutes, apparently lost in memories. Lydia, fearing to interrupt, waited in mute fascination. Something of this history she had guessed; much she might have guessed from words, hints, clues, carelessly sown in the past; but little or nothing had she ever known definitely.

"You weren't a strong child, and we feared the effect on you of the Atlantic voyage. Besides, our engagement was to last eight weeks only. So we left you in Mrs. Grummie's care. Five weeks after we reached New York your mother—"

"A month later she died; and when I had paid funeral expenses I was penniless in a strange land, our company had gone back home, and my chance of ever seeing England again was to turn on me. I wrote Mrs. Grummie to look out for you, and—"

"But this isn't a hard-luck story. Ultimately I left the stage for employment more attractive and better paid; but it meant permanent residence in America. However, nothing called me back to England, since you were in good hands. I think we may say that for Mrs. Grummie."

"She was always kind," Lydia affirmed gently.

"When I could afford a trip back to England, I found you in the best of condition, and it seemed hardly right to uproot and transplant you to a bachelor establishment in a strange country. Moreover, my new work, you see, had divorced me wholly from my stage associations, and none of my new friends knew anything about me before I came to them, properly introduced, and I was careful not to excite their curiosity for reasons that will appear."

"I never mentioned your existence. This reticence grew into a habit as years went on. And when Mrs. Grummie died I had come to think it best for you to attain womanhood in England, and if possible marry some decent Englishman."

"Well—a substitute had to be found for Mrs. Grummie. Mrs. Hicks-Lorimer presented the strongest credentials. I can only say I'm sorry she turned out badly—and surprised. That, however, is well over and done with. Henceforward you live with me."

"Oh, daddy, daddy dear! You mean it? You mean it?"

"It would have been better if it could have been postponed a few weeks," Craven returned without enthusiasm. "But there is no helping what mischief has been done."

"But surely, daddy, you can explain to her—"

"He silenced her with a gesture effective if a shade theatrical, and walked with her to a closed hatch, where they seated themselves.

"But I—"

"Hear me first, if you please, Lydia. Although your father, I'm by no means an old man. And—love is paramount! When you come to me and say, 'I love this man,' whomsoever he may be, I shan't interfere—even as now, when you say, 'I can't love this man,' I refrain from insisting. Mrs. Merriell and I love each other. She plays me a great compliment; for I'm fifteen years her senior. I can't permit my daughter—"

"But if you will only listen to me!"

"Well?" Craven demanded severely. "I haven't the least desire to come between you and Mrs. Merriell. I think she's very lovely, and I wish you both every happiness."

"That is my own dear girl!" Clipping her face between his palms, he lifted her to receive his kiss.

"I only want," the girl resumed, "I hoped you could make her understand, as you have me, by explaining—"

"Make your mind easy. There's been no real harm done. I've already received her assurance that our relations will continue as before. She understands—it is not as fully as you do."

"If I told her all that I've just told you, she might ask questions I couldn't answer; not, at least, until she is my wife, perhaps not then. Surely you must realize that your faith has taken a great deal on trust."

"You have refrained from putting a question that, with Mrs. Merriell, would take the form of a demand. What is the nature of this business of mine to which I have referred but never named?"

"You will tell me when you think I should know, daddy."

"I'm quite sure you oughtn't to know," he said gravely; "but I'm quite sure you've got to, if our relations are to continue in love and trust. Moreover, I know I can trust you, and were I to keep you in ignorance, much might happen that you wouldn't understand. That might make you doubt me, judge, mistrust me. You n. r. on occasion see me in conference with strange men, of a class I'd normally have nothing in common with. You'd have to become accustomed to my keeping strange hours—and help me keep them secret. You may even hear odd whispers about me—rumors that I'm not altogether what I seem. Well, they'll be justified, for I'm not. New York knows me as a feather-brained fashionable, with a decent income from the real estate business I maintain as a blind. I'm ashamed to have no object in existence other than amiable lolling. Whereas, in reality—"

"Although their attitude was absolute, Craven came closer to his daughter and lowered his voice:

"This is a great secret, dear girl. Guard it as you would your life. I'm in charge of the secret diplomatic service representing Downing Street in the United States!"

NATIONAL SAFETY URGENTLY DEMANDS WITHDRAWAL SUIT

For the Dissolution of the United States Steel Corporation.

EDITOR EDMONDS THINKS

Since the Lower Court Has Decided That the Corporation Was Obeying
the Law There Is No Excuse for Allowing Suit to be Dragged Along.

Considering the danger that lies in the present situation, Editor Edmonds of the Manufacturers Record, Baltimore, is decidedly of the opinion that the government's suit for the dissolution of the United States Steel Corporation should be withdrawn. Discussing the matter the Record says: "The steel plants are the very backbone of national preparedness. Without such plants there could be no navy, no railways, no guns, no shells. At times like this, instead of hampering the steel companies, they should be encouraged. They should be treated, as well as regarded, as a national asset."

"The giants of industry are the best preparedness factor that we possess, and instead of hindering their growth everything possible should be done to facilitate their expansion and development."

"There should be at this time a domestic era of industrial peace, in order that we may be all the stronger in national defense."

"There is now pending in the Supreme Court the case of the government against the United States Steel Corporation. That suit has been dragged through the courts, delayed and kept pending, until it has taken on the aspect of the lawsuit that Dickens used to satirize the law's delays. Recently argued before the United States Supreme Court on appeal, it still hangs in suspense, and in the usual course taken by cases before the Supreme Court no decision is likely in months. The government should now dismiss the suit."

"Since the lower court unanimously decided that the corporation was obeying the law, and since the facts prove it to the uttermost mind of the average layman, there is no excuse for permitting the legal sword to remain suspended over the corporation's head."

"What until now was merely a suggestion in the interest of simple justice has become, by reason of the national danger, a matter of national necessity."

"The enlargement of the steel plants of the country has been made necessary to national defense. The general board of the navy, for instance, has indicated that the plants on which the nation relies in time of war should be located in the interior, where they would be safe from attack in case of invasion."

"Whether the Department of Justice is right in its contention that other subsidiaries are in the same position, the fact must be faced that the development of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company has been halted by the suit now pending in the Supreme Court."

"In justice to the department its position should be clearly stated. The department holds that by acquiring this and other properties the Steel Corporation restrained trade in violation of the Sherman law, it claims that there was never any intention of developing the Tennessee company, that the failure to develop the property now proves that the original intent was merely to suppress competition; that other subsidiaries, under the same legal attack and in the same danger of separation, have steadily been developed while the suit has dragged through the courts."

"This, however, is a mere assertion of opinion, to which ascertainable facts give the answer. When the Steel Corporation bought the Tennessee company to annihilate the national financial situation, which was then acute, they first obtained the consent of President Roosevelt. They laid the situation frankly before the chief executive of the country. There was no one else to whom they could go. The Sherman law has always baffled even the best lawyers, but it can surely give us to whether the intent acts are banned or permitted under the law—if, while a purpose is passing, you ask the policeman whether you can cross the street, he will answer yes or no. Business men in doubt cannot get such information from the Department of Justice, nor even from the Federal Trade Commission. The law does not permit it. So the Steel Corporation went to the president of the United States. After hearing the facts, he said he could see no objection to the purchase that it was clearly in the public interest rather than against it."

"Immediately the Steel Corporation began broad improvements and developments. Appropriations for improvements amounting to between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 were promptly made and expended, showing the good faith of the corporation in developing the property. Other appropriations amounting to many millions of dollars have been voted for additional extensions when the government intervened and entered suit, claiming that the purchase of the Tennessee company gave the corporation a monopoly of the ores of the country."

"There was never any justification for this claim. It is absolutely without foundation. Even the excuse of the department of justice was swept aside when the lower court rendered its decision. The public interest cannot be served by continuing the proceedings. The business world is co-operating with the government in the present national emergency, and the government should show good faith in dealing with business."

Has Called

THE NEW EDISON

The New Edison is not a talking machine. It is the only instrument ever invented that re-creates the human voice and the music of human-played instruments.

Thomas A. Edison has subjected his new art—Music's Re-Creation—to the most exacting test possible for such an invention—that of direct comparison with the original.

Great singers have stood beside the New Edison in Carnegie Hall, New York; Symphony Hall, Boston; the Astor Gallery and elsewhere.

They have sung note for note with the New Edison's Re-Creation of their voices before more than 300,000 music lovers and critics, who marvelled at their inability to distinguish the original from the Re-Creation.

We Want YOUR Opinion

As a lover of some kind of music we value your opinion. We want you to come to the store and listen to a Re-Creation Concert. We want you to come even if you haven't the slightest idea that you will ever purchase a New Edison. We shall see to it that you do not feel any more obligated than you would if listening to your own instrument in your own home.

REV. JENKINS WAS AN ENTHUSIAST

Found Nerv-Worth in Truth
a Family Tonic

This Nerv-Worth endorser is the widely known pastor of the McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church of Cumberland, Md. He is an exceedingly grateful man. Read what he says:

"I would say in giving my testimony to the effectiveness of Nerv-Worth that I have not been influenced by any argument of Nerv-Worth concerning what it claims to do in the case of nervous indigestion, nervousness and general weakness."

"I have used it in my family with the result that I am willing to risk this, my testimonial, more for the good of others than the company of Nerv-Worth manufacturers, believing it will help the suffering wherever it is possible for Nerv-Worth to reach the case."

"I am, yours sincerely in truth as far as I can discern it in the properties of Nerv-Worth."

G. W. W. JENKINS,
Pastor of the McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church, Cumberland, Md."
